BIG GAME.

Sheriff Killian, of Hall County, Captures Two Notorious Criminals.

A Hand to Hand Fight With the Desperate Villains.

A Wisconsin Sheriff En Route to Recapture Them.

Yesterday afternoon a brief telegram was received in this city announcing that Sheriff Killian, of Hall County, had come upon the notorious Williams or Maxwell brothers, who have so long successfully eluded the officers of the Badger state, and has seized one and cornered the next.

Nebraska seems to be a favorite resort for the worst criminals that go unhung. They go out imagining that the state is in an advanced scale of barbarism, and that once here they are practically safe from arrest and punishment. Unfortunately such a feeling has been justified by the action of the authorities in too many cases, but that trouble is done away with largely now, and the "Avenge Hand" now strikes as quickly here as in staid old New England.

Not only is the officer ready to perform his duty, but every citizen seems to receive himself into a committee of one to see that no guilty man escapes, and, animated by this spirit, the people are rapidly becoming a race of natural born republicans.

The past two days exemplified this in the most remarkable manner. The news of the arrest at Grand Island of two such type criminals from Wisconsin produced no small sensation, yet, contrary to the old-time feeling, there was no agitation beyond the natural excitement of a chase for a criminal, notwithstanding the fact that the objects of pursuit not only were guilty murderers but were retreating the officers and trying to add to the extent of the enormities laid at their door. The particulars of the detection, the chase and the capture are in brief as follows:

On Tuesday night a farmer living about two miles south of Grand Island came into that city and told Sheriff Killian that there were two suspicious parties at his house. He said that they claimed to be hunters from Hastings, but the farmer, seeing that they carried Winchester rifles, thought they were not exactly the kind of gun to shoot geese with, so went in and told Killian, who started out about 5 o'clock Wednesday morning, with a deputy, and went in the house, where both Ed and Alonzo Maxwell, alias Williams, were in bed. The sheriff ordered them up, as he wished to speak with them, as he got up, dressed himself, with the exception of his hat and coat, and excused himself to do some errand. Killian then stepped up to Ed and was about to lay his hand on him, when Williams drew his revolver on the sheriff. The sheriff grasped the revolver and wrestled it away from him, and with the assistance of the farmer and one of the farmer's sons, threw him to the floor, while the farmer and son sat on him, the sheriff tried to get the handcuffs on him. Ed gave a regular Indian war whoop and Killian told his deputy to guard the door. As he stepped outside, he saw Alonzo running at full speed towards him with revolver drawn. Killian stepped to one side and the ball from Alonzo's revolver passed him and lodged in the grass. Killian now stepped inside again, with the deputy on guard at the door with a double barreled shotgun. As soon as Killian went back to Ed, to endeavor to get the cuffs on him, Alonzo tried to force his way through the door, and the deputy covered him with his gun, but it missed fire, Alonzo then ran off, and has not been seen since. It is thought he is hiding in the tall grass near there, and a large posse of men are now scouring the country for him.

Sheriff Killian safely lodged Ed Maxwell, alias Williams, in the county jail, and now awaits the arrival of the sheriff of Pepin county, Wis., who telegraphed that he would leave on the first train for Grand Island. The posse out after Alonzo have not returned up to this hour of writing.

The history of the crime with which these men are charged is a remarkable one, as is also that of their escape and the circumstances connected with it. On the 10th of July last, Milton A. Coleman, under sheriff, of Durant, Wis., and his brother, Charles Coleman, ex-sheriff of Pepin county, Wis., were shot and killed by the Williams brothers, two well-known desperadoes, whom they were endeavoring to arrest. A posse of thirty armed men pursued the murderers, with the intention of lynching them if they had caught them. On the 27th of July, the men, still being searched for, were sighted and called upon to surrender, but they answered by opening fire on the posse. They were at this time in Eau Claire woods and the pursuit was continued with redoubled vigor, six noted Indian scouts and thirty bloodhounds accompanying the company of Lexington cavalry, two hundred men. The most intense excitement prevailed but the search continued without success until about two months ago, when a man supposed to be Lon Williams was arrested. He denied his identity with the murderer, and stated that his name was Wm. Kuhl. He also asserted that on the date of the killing he was working for a farmer at Hamilton, Illinois. There has been a great contest over the supposed identity of Kuhl and Lon Williams, alias Maxwell, which was still pending when the affair at Grand Island was telegraphed east. The sheriff of Pepin county will arrive in Omaha to-morrow and proceed to Grand Island with the proper requisition papers, etc. The prisoner will probably stop over one night on his return trip to enjoy the hospitalities of the Hotel Guy.

The Country. Who that has ever lived any time in the country but must have heard of the virtues of Burdock as a blood purifier. Burdock Blood Bitters cure dyspepsia, biliousness and all disorders arising from impure blood or deranged liver or kidneys. Price $1.00, trial bottles 10 cts. nov-1w

My mother was afflicted a long time with neuralgia, and a dull, heavy, inactive condition of the whole system, headache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physicians or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters, with such good effect that she seems and feels young now, although over 70 years old. We think there is no other medicine fit to use in the family.—A lady in Providence, R. I. nov-15

Acknowledgement. Mrs. Watson B. Smith, desires, through these columns, to acknowledge the heartfelt sympathy of the public in her recent great and sudden bereavement. She also wishes to express her deep gratitude for the many words of respect for her departed husband, which have been published and uttered throughout the state, and for the tokens of esteem for Col. Smith's character which have been extended.

PERSONAL. H. J. Simpson of Stuart, is in town. James Kearney, of Denver, is in the city. Alex. Swan, the heavy cattle owner, arrived yesterday from the west. C. E. Beebe, of Lincoln, is in the city, staying at the Creighton house. W. H. Clark, of Waterloo, was among the arrivals in the city yesterday. Fred Parker and A. C. Ballet, of Soo Falls, are in the city at the Creighton.

Hon. Thomas L. Kimball, general manager of the Union Pacific railroad, returned yesterday afternoon from Denver and Laramie. Alice Oates and her variety troupe were passengers on the west bound Union Pacific train yesterday. They go through to the coast and open in San Francisco. Alice is the sister of the well known Oates.

THE VICTORY. The returns which yesterday continued to come in from the various wards and precincts, show the Republican victory of Tuesday to have been, in Douglas county, most complete and overwhelming. Important telegraph news prevents an extended local election report, which will be more complete, and will be given in tabular form in the next issue of THE BEE.

CHIMES OF NORMANDY. An Excellent Performance by the Omaha Harmonic Society.

The excellent work which the Harmonic Society has accomplished in uniting and training our local vocalists has been frequently alluded to in these columns. Few, outside of the press and the enterprising managers of the organization appreciate the difficulties which this musical society has to contend with since its organization and fewer still know what earnest and persevering work on the part of its officers and members is responsible for the excellent rendering of the "Chimes of Normandy" which was presented to our people on Tuesday evening at Boyd's opera house.

CHIMES OF NORMANDY.

An Excellent Performance by the Omaha Harmonic Society.

The excellent work which the Harmonic Society has accomplished in uniting and training our local vocalists has been frequently alluded to in these columns. Few, outside of the press and the enterprising managers of the organization appreciate the difficulties which this musical society has to contend with since its organization and fewer still know what earnest and persevering work on the part of its officers and members is responsible for the excellent rendering of the "Chimes of Normandy" which was presented to our people on Tuesday evening at Boyd's opera house.

If space permitted it a detailed explanation of the musical merits of the rendering of the "Chimes" might prove interesting as it certainly would prove gratifying to every friend of the Harmonic society. To say that no opera has ever been put upon the Omaha stage by local talent, which will compare with last night's performance, is fair praise.

Especially must be made of the excellent work of the chorus, the parts were well advanced, the voices uniformly good, and the cues taken with promptness and union. In volume of sound, and in harmony of rendition the choruses of the Chimes of Normandy have rarely been more satisfactorily presented on the metropolitan stage, and Prof. Mayer and the ladies and gentlemen who participated deserve every congratulation over the happy results of their study. In speaking of the orchestra the admission must be made that the work was not up to the usual mark of the Musical Union. The overture bore evidence of hasty preparation and insufficient rehearsal and the accompaniment frequently lagged. Mr. Steinhauser has under his charge an excellent class of musicians capable of performing with credit to themselves and pleasure to our people, but no individual ability can make up for the lack of practice and rehearsal. To-night we are sure that they will be able to give a better account of themselves.

The solo parts were all taken by vocalists too well known in Omaha musical circles to require an extended introduction. Mrs. Chas. E. Squires as Serpolette, the piquant comic heroine, did full justice to her reputation as an accomplished singer. Her voice was clear, true and sympathetic. Her acting was easy and thoroughly in accordance with a conscientious conception of the different characters she was called upon to assume. The continued applause which met Mrs. Squires' brilliant efforts evidenced how thoroughly she maintained the place which she has won in the hearts of Omaha's musical people.

The part of Germaine was admirably filled by Miss Lizzie Caldwell, whose first appearance in light opera in our city gives rare promise of future success. Miss Caldwell was a voice of considerable range and compass. Her singing was marked by an ease and naturalness demanded by the sweet and simple Germaine and in the applause which greeted the solo singers, Miss Caldwell was by no means forgotten. Mr. Wilkie Henri, and the Goussard of Mr. Pennell were all that the many admirers of these well known singers could desire. Mr. Mayo, who took the difficult part of Jean deserves more than passing notice not less because it was his first appearance on the Omaha stage than because the gentleman displayed rare powers of humorous and mirth provoking expression joined to a pleasing tenor voice, and an easy and unaffected action.

Almost Young Again. My mother was afflicted a long time with neuralgia, and a dull, heavy, inactive condition of the whole system, headache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physicians or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters, with such good effect that she seems and feels young now, although over 70 years old. HIS INITIATION.

Joseph, the Artist, Joins an Omaha Dramatic Club.

His Initiation Into Its Mysteries.

Since the passage of the Slocumb bill not a few devices have been adopted to evade its intent and purpose, and among these is the formation of clubs, of which there are now several in the city and county, all regularly incorporated under the state laws of Nebraska. Among these is the Omaha dramatic club, with headquarters at the Stadt theatre, concerning which Joseph, the well known pianist, told the following story to a Denver reporter:

While en route for San Francisco, on reaching Omaha on a Sunday, there was a lay-over for several hours, and Joseph and a few others went out for a stroll about the city. Naturally enough they became thirsty and sought for beer, but the saloons were all closed, nor even were the back doors open. After wandering about for some time Joseph's eye was caught by a sign upon which was inscribed in large letters "Stadt Theater." Turning to his companions he exclaimed: "Where there's a Stadt theater there must be Germans, and where there are Germans there must be beer, follow me," and approaching the door, entered the vestibule of the theater. There was a bar to one side, with a bartender behind it, and a number of parties kind of lounging around. "Beer," said Joseph, comprehensively waving his hand to signify the number of glasses required. "We don't sell beer on Sundays," was the reply.

"But," said the artist, expostulating, "I see these other gentlemen are supplied." "That's all right," replied the man behind the bar, "they are members." "Members of what?" cried Joseph's entire party. "Of the club," was importunately answered.

Happening to glance round, one of the party at this juncture recognized an old Chicago friend among the party, and hailed him, a general introduction followed, and Joseph and his friends were conducted to a room where, after a few trifling ceremonials had been gone through, they were declared duly elected honorary members of the club, and their names were enrolled on its list of membership.

Our troubles are all over now, they thought, and, returning to the main room, again repeated the request for beer. "Nein," said the stolid bar man, "you must be stockholders." "Well," Joseph asked, evidently fancying that the stockholder business meant treating the crowd, "how many shares have we got to purchase?" "Five," was the reply, as the barman handed him five tickets, each one of which entitled the bearer to a glass of beer, and which was one for each member of the party.

"Only a quarter," interrogated Joseph. "Only a quarter," replied the host, for the first time breaking out into a broad grin. How many quarters, or rather shares, in the stocks of the Stadt beer bank were subsequently owned by the artist and his companions dependent sayeth not, only it is stated on the authority of Mayor Wolcott that both the artist and his companions slept soundly and until late the following morning.

EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS. Interesting Service for Business Men Tuesday Night.

The Tuesday night meeting at the Presbyterian church was especially interesting to business men, many of whom were present. After a song service of twenty minutes, Mr. Whitte asked all to unite in prayer with Rev. J. W. Shank, of the Eighteenth street M. E. Church. Following this Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan sang a duet, with chorus, "The Crowning Day is Coming," after which silent prayer was offered by the audience for God's blessing on the words as should be read.

Mr. Whittle read for his text Matt. 16:26. "What is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" The speaker tried to impress upon his hearers the fact that in a life of life to live, not all of death to die. The grain of this life is only for a short time and then fades away. Once in a banking house a star was made over the death of a prominent citizen. Many were anxious and one inquired "what did he leave?" A Christian man who was in the conversation remarked that he left it all. "We can't take our wealth with us when we go hence. It does not fit us for eternity." At the close of the discourse Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan sang very beautifully and with much expression. "Have you any room for Jesus." Several short talks were made by business and professional men before the meeting closed.

Meetings will continue during the week each afternoon and evening.

SOLDIERS ON WHEELS. A Regiment of Troops en Route East from the Pacific Coast.

At 10 o'clock Wednesday a special train consisting of six baggage cars, eight day coaches, three Pullman sleepers and a caboose, arrived in this city from the west. The train had on board several hundred soldiers, officers and ladies, who left the Pacific Coast on Friday for the New England coast, to various points of which they have been transferred.

There were of the Fourth infantry Regt., Co. K and F from Ft. Canby, Washington; Co. A, C and L from Ft. Point, San Francisco harbor; light battery Co. H, from Presidio; Co. M, from San Diego, Cal., the headquarters of the Fourth infantry, and the band of the Fourth infantry, from Presidio. All were under command of General Graham, whose family accompanied him.

The officers on board were as follows: Captains Hosbrook, Throckmorton and family, Excan, Smith and family, Cushing and family, Field, Bancroft and family, Fugger, R. Q. M., and family, Townsley, Leary and wife, Phillips, Stroug, Fish and family, Alexander, Padgeson, Stuart and family, Cummings and wife, Gerard, Totten, Howe and family, Everetts and family, and Schroeder.

The train only remained on this side about five minutes and pulled across the bridge to be transferred immediately to another special train for the east.

GENERAL SHERMAN. Fourteen Days Coming From Bismarck to Omaha.

Fleeing From the Fangs of Winter.

GENERAL SHERMAN.

Fourteen Days Coming From Bismarck to Omaha.

Fleeing From the Fangs of Winter.

A few days ago the steamer Red Cloud, of the Baker line, passed down, and it was then stated that a government boat would arrive in about ten days. The latter gained time on her predecessor, and at 4:30 p. m. yesterday rounded to gracefully at the levee, between Farnham and Douglas streets, where she was soon boarded by a Bee reporter, who made the acquaintance of the officers.

The General Sherman, for that is the name of the handsome craft, is officered as follows: Capt. W. G. Ling, master; John Leasure, clerk; A. J. Spahr, pilot; J. K. Martin, head engineer; John A. Marsh, second engineer; Nelson Simons, mate; W. H. Alexander, steward. The steamer was built in the shipyards on the Ohio, opposite New Albany, Ind., in 1877, and with her counterpart, the Don Cameron, started for Bismarck in the spring of that year.

The Don Cameron was a few days behind the Sherman and striking a snag just this side of Sioux City, went down to lie forever in the bed of the Missouri. The survivor of the twin crafts is a trim and well equipped boat. She is 145 feet long, by 28 feet breadth of beam and 286 registered tonnage. She is provided with two engines, 12 inch cylinders and 41 foot stroke, and is fitted up in first-class style, her cabin being the best of any on the river, excepting, perhaps, the Montana and Dakota.

Capt. Ling is an old river captain who formerly commanded one of the packets in the Omaha St. Joe line, back in the '60's. He was master of the same steamer on which Harry Deuel was clerk in the fall of 1869, and ran on the line for ten years. He inquired for Messrs. Deuel and W. W. Copeland, both of whom he desired to see before leaving.

The General Sherman was built to carry freight and passengers on the upper Missouri, and has run between Bismarck and Fort Benton on the Missouri and Ferry's Landing on the Yellowstone. The trip down the river is the first since she was taken up in 1877, and is for purpose of undergoing extensive repairs, in the course of which thirty feet will be added to her length. She will return to her length. She will return to her length.

The boat left Bismarck October 26th, and has made only such stops as were necessitated by high winds and a bad river. Considerable snow fell before she left, the first being the fall of three weeks ago last Friday, which was reported by Captain Williams, of the Red Cloud. No ice has been run across yet, and Captain Ling is hesitating to get south before winter sets in. The stop here was to obtain coal and rations for the trip to St. Louis, and these were supplied by the officers at the military headquarters in this city. It was expected that the boat would leave at daylight this morning.

Get Out Doors. The close confinement of all factory work, gives the operative pallid faces, poor appetite, languid, miserable feelings, poor blood, inactive liver, kidneys and urinary troubles, and all the physicians and medicine in the world cannot help them unless they get out of doors or use Hop Bitters, the purest and best remedy, especially for such cases, having abundance of health, sunshine and rosy cheeks in them. They cost but a trifle. See another column.—Christian Recorder, Nov. 10

CLOSING THE ARGUMENT.

The DeGroat Case Still Before the District Court.

The argument of counsel in the trial of Charles DeGroat occupied the entire day in the district court, which resumed its session at 9 o'clock yesterday morning.

District Attorney Burnham opened the argument for the state, and spoke two hours, in which he made a careful review of the whole case and gave the most important testimony.

J. R. Clarkson, Esq., for the defense, followed in an argument on legal points, and presented again to the jury much of the testimony presented last week in behalf of the prisoner.

Gen. John C. Cowin then made the chief closing argument for the defense. His effort was a most eloquent and masterly one and attracted the earnest attention of the jury and spectators. He spoke three hours.

At 5:30 o'clock Judge Thurston began the concluding argument of the case, and presented the case of the state in a most forcible and able manner. During the brief time he spoke the court room was breathlessly still. At 6 o'clock Judge Savage adjourned court until 9 a. m. to-day, when Judge Thurston will continue his speech and the case begin to the jury.

Traveling Men find it hard to keep in good health, owing to the constant change of water, diet, and the jarring of the cars. All these things injure the kidneys, while Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure is certain to counteract them.
